SECURITY INFORMATION

42 Division: Headquarters at Menghwa (100-20, 25-15).
 124 Regiment at Tali (100-11, 25-43).
 125 Regiment at Yungp'ing (99-54, 25-25).
 126 Regiment at Chingtung (100-54, 24-27).

4. The 15 Army was in the Ch'uching (103-45, 25-32)-Weining (104-12, 26-52)-P'uan (104-53, 25-47) area, with its headquarters at Ch'uching.
5. Special units in the area included the following:
  - 1 Basic Cadre Regiment at Chenyueh (101-28, 21-58).
  - 3 Basic Cadre Regiment at Nanchiao (100-11, 22-07).
  - Public Security Regiment at Ch'eli (100-50, 21-58).
  - 2 Independent Division, less 1 and 3 Regiments, at Munchi (99-47, 22-43).
  - 1 Garrison Brigade at Yingchiang (98-05, 24-46).
  - 2 Garrison Brigade at T'engch'ung (98-29, 25-01).
6. There were 12 anti-aircraft guns in Kunming, but few planes. An unattached artillery unit was stationed there. It was free to move to any area where it might be needed.
7. Most of the Chinese Communist troops in the area were brought in by CHEN Keng and are not Yunnanese. Many of them were formerly of LIN Biao's command and are from North China. Regular army troops are used for guarding lines of communication and large cities and towns. Outlying areas are garrisoned by the militia and by special units. The troops now in the area do not compare favorably with those formerly stationed there, because the best soldiers were sent to Korea and reports of Communist casualties have been received in Yunnan. These reports have lowered the morale of the troops in Yunnan.
8. There were about 1,500 Soviets in Kunming, including civil and military advisers, engineers and miners, though there are apparently no unusual mining activities in the area.
